We believe opinions and advisories should be based on a thorough understanding of the technological background as well as a thorough understanding of the product, bio-system, or process at issue. Our opinions are diversified yet specific on each area in issue. Opinions and advisories are often needed in consulting with clients, in formulating trial strategies, in negotiating technology transfer deals, and in structuring technology agreements. These are only a few of the areas opinions are required. As technology transfer concerns rise, we have the knowledge, skill, and experience to advise in technological areas of concern. Our opinions and advisories can assist in moving projects efficiently and expeditiously past progression hurdles.